Hi Derek,

Unfortunately, the marketing team is working through a faceplate redesign with multiple departments. The team has expectations to finish these efforts by the end of October. I'll send you a design as soon as possible!

The writing on the side of the green casing is now being etched. Some of that information is being generated by the machine that assembles the circulators which is why some information is represented by strings of X characters. See attached .ai file for layout.

You had some great questions on our last call regarding a point person for specific information. Please see details below:

1. Technical Questions: We have multiple team members (inside and outside the marketing department) helping us with these rendering efforts and if there are any questions, we can help connect you once we know what product/SKU you're working on.
2. Art Direction: Ken will be the best person to help guide you through materials. He has the most familiarity with the products.
3. VNTANA UI/UX Platform Building: Jess and Jai will be working with you on the angles and render outputs once we get to that point.

We already have the team working with the engineers to find out if we can get SolidWorks files. We should have an update for that during our next status update on Thursday.

Have a great weekend!

Thank you,

Liz

Liz,

Hello. Do you have the additional faceplates for the in the spreadsheet? As well as the stickers for the side of the housing?
